Chapter 1 by Jack Frost

We've had a long summer this time.

They said that this was the longest summer ever, but a long summer means an even longer winter.

Every day they would warn me that winter was coming, i never believed them.

But the white walkers came back, they brought the winter with them.

We weren't expecting the walkers to come back.

I just happend to be the first one to come across them.

Chapter 2 by cher lloyd

They always left a chill down my spine every time I past, them like they knew something that I didn't. I decided to take the short cut to the castle to tell my husband about the white walkers that I had just encountered. When I arrived an hour later, the guards greeted me with respect.

"Queen Clare! We weren't expecting you till tomorrow."

"Enough! Chatter, let me past or it's off with your head!"

"Yes, Your Grace"

As I entered into the castle I felt a chill down my spine. I entered the throne room and saw the crown on the floor with blood on it. I let out an involuntary scream.

This meant war.

Chapter 3 by adware

My eyes rose from his crown to a crone on the throne, a face I knew too well-- The queen, a false queen. The Queen of Hearts. She twirled a sceptre in one hand, which was really just a nasty spiked mace dipped in molten gold. Now, it was dipped in someone's blood too. She didn't smile at me, but I knew her well enough that this frown was the closest she would ever get.

"Get off of that throne!" I screamed.

"Queen Looney, I'm pleased to have you." Was her reply.

"I am Queen Clare, and I order you..."

"Are you?" She mocked. "I thought you had to be married to a living king for that title."

I shook my fist and my fist shook me back.

"What have you done to him Hearts?"

"Give me back my catchphrase, and you'll get back your husband, Looney."

I caught a glimpse of the head of my guard watching through the doorway. We made eye contact, and exchanged a little nod.

"What catchphrase?" I asked

"OFF WITH HER HEAD!" She belted.

"I have to admit," I chuckled as my guard descended on her with pikes and axes. "I couldn't have said it better myself."
